The Proposed Transfer of the Pan Handle to Penusylvania. Referring to an article from the Wellsburg Herald copied elsewhere, we must say that we cannot concur in the Herald's rants at that time for U. S. Senator, Governor, etc. The Herald is striking at a gentleman who is not responsible for the present utterances of this paper, as we to advocate are not for its utterances ten years ago. every way unjust. We do not now remember that the Herald was particularly vehement in its advocacy at that time of a detachment of the Pan Handle instead of a division of Virginia, but we grant all that it may seem to claim of glory in that direction. Yet the editor of the Herald knows that the projected excision leased. We are also certain that the exof the Pan Handle was carefully considered by the leading citizens of the Pan Handle counties who were then anxiously casting about for some way to preserve civil government here and to strengthen the hands of the United States in their contest with the rebellion; and that it was also considered by the leading members of the Government at Washington, and found by both to be impracticable. There was no tenable theory either here or at Washington upon which the transfer could proceed. Neither Congress nor the Executive had adopted the STEVENS theory that the territory of the rebellious States could be treated as conquered and divided up at the will of Congress. The theory of the Government at Washington was the one adopted here in the reorganization of Virginia, viz: that the States must continue to be recognized as legal entities, although the governments thereof had been overthrown by domestic violence, and were for the time abdicated. Neither then nor since has the Executive or Congress accepted or acted upon any theory of war power or reconstruction under which those Pan Handle counties could have been transferred to Pennsylvania, except by the consent of the legal government of Virginia. There was no time after the reorganization of Virginia when that consent could have been obtained; and it must now be obvious that any attempt by the people of the Pan Handle to transfer themselves to Pennsylvania, or of Pennsylvania to extend her jurisdiction over them, before the reorganization of the Virginia government here, would have received no recognition at Washington, nor any legal support anywhere. Some things could be done in the confu sion of 1861 and some could not; and in the latter category we must class the projected violent transfer of the Pan-Handle to Pennsylvania. But it was be lieved at Washington, as it was here, that a reorganization of the abdicated government of Virginia would greatly strengthen the hands of the Government. It is the opinion now of statesmen and unanimous sentiment of those in the northwestern counties of Virginia who from Old Virginia, a legal opportunity for all the friends of separation could not have been aspirants for Senatorships or Governorships; and it is hardly becoming or just for those, who like the Herald, opposed a division to charge now that those who favored it were animated by mercenary mo-

For ourselves, we must say that we did not in 1861 see any way whereby such a transier of the Pan Handle could be effected; nor can we now see that there was any way till there was a legally organized State government having jurisdiction of these counties which might, with an is a rumor at Columbia, the state capital acceptance by the Legislature of Pennsylthat the entire Charleston delegation in vania and with consent of Congress, make the transfer. This might have been done for indictment at the approaching term of under the restored government, and it the court of general sessions, which open there are transfer to the court of the it the Herald has advocated the measure since the inauguration of the restored government, in such a way as to bring it to public attention, we are not able now to recal the fact.

it is not too late to discuss this matter in a signed a formal pledge to support and practical way with a view to practical re- vote for Patterson in consideration of sesults. We are not prepared to say the caring his influence with the state board chances of success are not as good now as of canvassers in their favor, and against they have ever been. The party mana- the Mackey delegation, which claimed to gers in this State are sorely in want of have been elected. It is understood that money, and they are distressed to find a they are not to be charged with receiving any money for their votes, but that they way to raise it without increasing the taxes. Here is a way. Pennsylvania, without a doubt, would pay a good round sum for the little strip of territory which lies between her western line and her natural boundary, the Ohio river. She will give enough money, we doubt not, to build a handsome statehouse in that valley of perennial spring, the Kanawha. If the Legislature of West Virginia and the Legislature of Pennsylvania can agree on a price to be paid by the latter for these four counties, there need be no further ohstacle. The two States agreeing, the consent of Congress will be given as a matter of course; the Pan Handle will be long to Pennsylvania; the editor of the Herald will be made happy and his wisdom be glorified forever. Whatsay you, gentlemen of the Pan Handle delegation at Charleston?

A morron on the bill of exceptions in the Stokes case will be heard to-day.

The Transfer of the Panhandle to

(From the Wellsburg Herald.)
Our neighbor of the Wheeling Intel-LIGENCER has at last "struck ile," on the capital question and offered something which we can heartily endorse. He says that if the State of West Virginia will agree for the Panhandle counties to be annexed to Pennsylvania, where geographically, at least, they belong, he will agree that Charleston shall have the captital in peace, forever and a day. And further, in his zeal he as much as inti-mates that the balance of the State may say that we cannot concur in the Herald's opinion that the opportunity for the proposed transier of the Pan Handle to Pennsylvania was necessary lost when the new State was formed. The somewhat mallicious line of remark about the INTELLIOENCEN's advocacy of a division of Virginia, while legitimate enough perhaps in one sense as applied to the paper, is not so in its reflections on the personality and States Senatorships, its Governors, etc.. in that case, for him, go to Tophet. one sense as applied to the paper, is not so in its reflections on the personality and motives of the editors. The present editors of the INTELLIGENCER were not aspirant at that time for U. S. Senator, Gov. coning withstand, and though the sphar-tion papers were all prepared, the flesh proved weak, and few were found among the managing men to advocate it. The plau was barren of office and that settled it and are not for its utterances ten years ago.

It seems to us that this imputation of mercenary motives to the INTELLIGENCEN'S advocacy of the separation is in tion, as was seriously contemplated, the balance of what is now West Virginis, would have constituted itself a separate State, is doubtful; we do not believe they would, nor are we certain that they should. We are certain though, that we of the Panhandle were guilty of an error in joining ourselves to them irrevocably when we could have had ourselves reisting fact is no fault of ours; for we op posed it on all occasions until our loyalty to the new State was almost doubted, and like Logan, "our enemies pointed as they passed and said we were the friend of the white man"—down in Dixie.

The INTELLIGENCER of that day, advocated it as pertinaciously and more effectively, of course. And if there is anything that reconciles us to the martyrdom of our ancient friend's being unappreciated, as is the case that some folks, just now, seem disposed to deplore, it is the recollection of his zeal and of his indifference to the project of separation. People ence to the project of separation. People intimated then, that he had sapirations but if he had, what then? if he was am-bitious, grievously hath he answered it and scant due ats the Panhandle owes him on that account, at least outside of Wheeling town.

But we now enter on another and more hopeful era as is dimly shadowed forth in the present INTELLIGENCER's half jesting half in earnest remark.

We were shown a butcher knife the other day, by Mr. Hiram Frazier, which was manufactured by the new process of making steel, invented by Mr. Reese B. Smith, Esq., of Mt. There were between thirty and forty new buildings put up last summer; that, to-gether with the fact that rents are so very getner with the fact that rents are so very high, has induced many to build houses of their own.
